GENEVIEVE,

From the French of Hyppolyte Etiennez.

Translated for the Commercial Journal.

"At this moment, although the flight of Genevieve was utterly inexcusable, Francoise felt keenly the wrongs and reproaches which her imprudent conduct, ought to draw upon her; nevertheless she avowed every thing humbly. At her recital, Joseph contracted his eye-brows, his lips moved convulsively, but he restrained himself. This man possessed all the virtues of great and lofty souls; he knew that the conscience of the guilty was the best judge, and that remorse was the most cruel punishment. Instead of adding, by his language, to the regret, already so bitter, of his wife, he contented himself with considering her a moment in silence, and after this mute but energetic reprimand, he said:

"Come, it remains now for us to seek her."

"He took immediately his cap and jacket, and having offered his arm to his wife, they went out broken hearted. Night was already far advanced; the windows were closed every where. Joseph and Francoise, undecided at first, on the direction they ought to take, went to rap at the doors of all their acquaintances; none of them had seen Genevieve. Then they ran about at hazard, pursuing with eager step and look, every noise, every shadow, which from a distance, met their ears and eyes; but after two hours vain searching, they were forced to return home, harassed, bewildered, breathless and a prey to the keenest and most cruel despair.

"Several months had passed, since the departure of Genevieve, and during this long interval, they had never heard tell of her. Poultier, who had made use of every means to discover his daughter, convinced of his misfortune, no longer sought consolation, but in the recollection and regret of his beloved child. His temper had become dark and thoughtful. On Sundays, instead of joining, as in past times, his pot-companions, he shut himself up at home, and received nobody. Why, indeed, should Poultier seek company? He neither spoke nor laughed any longer; sometimes only, when he met on his way a child of the age and appearance of the one whom he had lost, he would stop and smile; but this smile was more painful yet, than the tears which fell at the same time on his blanched cheeks. Francoise even had undergone a complete change; she was no more that buxom and fresh looking woman, who, with a word, caused the whole market to laugh, and with a gesture made every one tremble. Francoise had grown very thin, and in losing her embonpoint, she also had lost all the influence she once possessed amongst the fishmongers. Now, she inspired no other feeling than that of pity. One evening when they had returned together from market, sad and silent, according to their custom, they found seated on the sill of their door, an errand boy, who was waiting for them. At the sight of Poultier and his wife, this boy rose and drew a letter out of his pocket. Joseph, in the greatest surprise, asked the unknown who it was that had charged him with this message; but the boy avoided a reply, and withdrew without saying a word.

This mysterious air put the climax to the workman's astonishment. Little fitted by nature for emotions of this kind, he commenced trembling in all his limbs—Mme. Poultier took the letter out of his hands and hurriedly broke the seal. This letter was without signature, and announced to them that Genevieve was at a convent of Ursulines in the rue du Bon'oy.

At this unexpected news, Joseph and his wife were so elated that they almost fainted with joy; they recovered, nevertheless, from this emotion, and ran immediately to the convent indicated. They had not been deceived. The abbess brought Genevieve to them; but how changed! She was no longer a child; her whole form was developed; her physiognomy had assumed a character dignified and imposing; her voice was sweet, her language elegant, her dress rich, and her manner filled with a grace and charm, quite inexplicable for a young girl of her age and condition in life. Father Poultier could not believe his eyes; Francoise was motionless with delight. They looked at their daughter with wonder. She, who had been profoundly moved by the sight of her parents, melted into tears and threw herself into their arms. At last, after the first embracings and caresses were over, Joseph recovered his speech.

"Come, come, Genevieve," said he, "I am in a great hurry to see you back under our roof."

The young girl prepared to follow him, but, at the same time, the abbess advanced towards her, and taking her by the hand, said:

"Genevieve, the unknown lady who brought you to this convent, remitted to me, for you, last evening, 2,000 francs in gold."

"Twelve thousand francs!" exclaimed Francoise, in utter astonishment; "but that is a fortune! Ah! come, my daughter, come;—with that you will not be under the necessity of selling fish."

"Nor flowers either," added Poultier.

At these words, Genevieve turned suddenly towards her father.

"Father, you are right; now I will no longer think of selling flowers, but I will make them."

When the young girl and her parents had returned home, the embraces, tears and caresses were renewed; some feelings can only be expressed freely in private. After tender sentiments, those of curiosity prevailed; Francoise was burning to learn what had occurred to Genevieve since her flight; Poultier was desirous to know the person who had so generously endowed his daughter; but at these various questions, the countenance of Genevieve darkened, her lips grew livid, and she refused so resolutely to reply, that Joseph and Francoise, who knew by experience the danger of contending with such a disposition, did not dare to insist upon it.

Nevertheless, a singular discovery soon aroused the attention of the whole family. Among the pretty jewels, which Genevieve had brought back, from her mysterious wanderings, was a golden chain, which justly excited admiration and surprise, by reason of the richness of its material and the extreme elegance of its workmanship. The links, each representing a flower hanging upon a stem, and surrounded with leaves, fell in such confusion, and at the same time, with so much grace, that they formed, in connection with the diamonds which they encased, a perfect and exquisite garland. This jewel, without any doubt, did not have its equal in the world. Genevieve, in preference to the unaffected astonishment of her parents, let it remain for some time on the mantel-piece, but one fine day, she placed it upon her neck, and from that moment, they were no longer permitted to handle it, nor examine the ingenuity of its execution. The tender solicitude which the young girl felt for this precious object, was too natural to excite the astonishment of Mme. Poultier.

Still it was not long before she remarked that Genevieve would, occasionally, lock herself up in her room for hours at a time. This conduct struck her as singular; and having once peeped at her, through the key-hole, she saw her passing the chain through her fingers, as if it were a rosary, and absorbed in the deepest meditation. Nothing more was wanting to put the whole house in confusion; they whispered, they gave utterance to a thousand different conjectures; but still, Genevieve remained mistress of her secret.

Here, now, was what so greatly pre-occupied the young girl.

When Genevieve, in her flight, found herself in the street she felt very much surprised. No one was stirring, the houses were all closed, and the silence of the sleeping town was only broken by the rumbling produced by the carts of belated hucksters, hastily driving to market. Still, the young girl, sustained by that feverish excitement which had urged her to the execution of this rash project, went hurriedly on her way. She proceeded thus for some time, without daring to turn her head; and having a kind of terror depicted on her countenance, as it she felt that she was pursued by that house, in which she had left all her better feelings, and sweetest affections. At last, when she believed herself to be out of the reach of pursuit, Genevieve stopped; a heavy sweat rolled down her forehead, and her limbs, overcome with fatigue, tottered beneath her. The young girl sat down upon a stone, and casting a curious glance around, perceived that she was in a quarter with which she was entirely unacquainted. For a moment, Genevieve lost courage. Then, the fresh air of the morning penetrating her thin attire, she experienced a painful sensation of cold and uneasiness. Upon that, she became calm, and began to reflect upon her situation; she thought of her father, who had evinced towards her such tender love, and the recollection of the poor old man caused her to shed tears. But, alas! her good angel had deserted her! The sun, rising at this moment, and gilding the street and houses with his rosy beams, let fall a ray upon the young girl. The pleasant warmth reanimated her, and suddenly, all her scruples vanished, as if the griefs of others would disappear, as had done her own.

Genevieve, then, had been there, for some time, silent and thoughtful, with her little bundle on her knees, and her white arms folded over each other, when a fine equipage drove around the corner, and came toward her. At the noise which it made, the young girl raised her hurried eyes, and at the same moment the carriage stopped.

Although from its shape, size and finish, this carriage was truly magnificent, still it presented an appearance, in the highest degree, extraordinary. Its color was dark, and its panels were decorated neither with armorial bearings nor coat-of-arms. The horses, also, were black, and their harness was not mounted with those heavy platings of glittering metal, which were fashionable at that period. The coachman, carefully wrapped up in a large cloak of sad colored clothes, and wearing his hat closely pulled down over his eyes, permitted but a small portion of his countenance to be seen; and then, the two footmen were evidently disguised under their brown and laceless liveries.

Almost immediately, the coach-door opened, and a tall man, rather inclined to corpulency, descended from the equipage. It could not be doubted that he was a noble personage, for he wore a sword, his coat was bespangled with gold and precious stones, and his splendor, according to the fashion of the day, was concealed under an enormous bunch of ribbons.

He advanced towards Genevieve with an air so affable, that in seeing his gracious smile, the young girl, who had, at first, been frightened, felt completely reassured.

"My lovely child," said the unknown, "what are you doing here, at this hour?"

At this question, Genevieve became as red as a cherry, and lowered her eyes.

"I see how it is," resumed the stranger, pointing with his finger to the little bundle, which Genevieve held before her, "you have committed an inconsiderate action. You have had some difficulty with your family, and have fled from home. That is not right—that—"

Immediately, an idea struck Genevieve, which was founded on a singular rumor then prevailing. The government, with the intention of increasing the population of its colonies, and, at the same time, to prevent the progress of begging, in France, had given instructions to the Lieutenant-General of Police, at Paris, to order the arrest of all vagrants, and particularly of the children found at large in the streets. These orders having been overstepped by the inferior officers, had excited much murmuring amongst the lower classes, and soon it was reported, by the people, that the arrested children were secretly murdered, in order to procure, for the heir apparent, a bath of blood, to cure him, it was said, of paralysis. Genevieve remembered, suddenly, this popular belief, and convinced that she was now in the presence of Count Berryer de Rameronville, Lieutenant-General of Police, she threw herself on her knees, clasped her hands together, and directing a supplicating look towards her interlocutor, said:

"Oh! my lord, do forgive me! I promise you to return to my parents."

The nobleman was singularly astonished, if not at this promise, at least at her request. Taking the young girl's hands in his own, and raising her kindly:

"Come," said he, "I will conduct you to them myself."

Genevieve, more dead than alive, suffered herself, mechanically, to be carried to the coach. The unknown whispered a few words to the coachman, and when he had taken a seat next to the young girl, the carriage went off at full gallop.

In about ten minutes the coach stopped. The nobleman descended first, and having taken the young girl in his arms, lifted her out. Genevieve threw uneasy looks around her. She found herself in a large court or rather garden, sprinkled with such a fine and brilliant sand, that one would willingly have believed it to be gold dust. All around she saw a hedge of gold elm-trees, which were cut to represent columns and portices; behind white marble walls, overloaded with sculptures, were perceived. In the back ground arose the splendid front of a palace, also of marble, adorned with statue, basso-relievos, and medallions in bronze, of which the dark-green color contrasted wonderfully with the pale and icy appearance of the wall.

At this sight Genevieve could not refrain from uttering a cry of surprise and admiration.

"But," exclaimed she, "this is not my father's dwelling!"

This innocent exclamation caused a smile on the stranger's countenance; but judging it best, doubtless not to satisfy the young girl's curiosity, he said:

"What may be your name, my child?"

"Genevieve, my lord."

"Well, Genevieve, follow me."

The young girl followed tremblingly her guide.—They ascended the steps of a large flight of stairs, with double bannisters of small twisted columns; and entered the house together. At first, they passed through several appartments all paved with mosaic work in the Italian style and of which the ceiling, decorated in arabesque, with golden foliage on a blue ground, represented mythological subjects from the gifted pencil of Gebelin; then, a dining hall also paved in mosaic, which offered to the eye a most beautiful diversity of colors. On one of the sides arose a rich pedestal of black marble, veined with gold, surmounted with a large shell of yellow antique, garnished with flowers, and out of which issued a jet of limpid waters which fell in cascades into a basin of porphyry devoted to the ablutions preceding and following the prepasts. In this apartment were paintings by Julien de Toulon; and four jasper statues, placed in the corner of the apartment, bore the name of Corfou, Pigalle and Clodion.

At last they reached the saloon. Here, all the preceding marvels again presented themselves; the mantle-piece of jasper, was upheld by four gilded Egyptians statues, and supported three beautiful vases of sevres china of a dark blue color, and apparently ancient enough to make an antiquary die with delight; four gilded stands sustained as many candelabras of exquisite workmanship; four lustres of rich crystal for a hundred wax-candles each, completed the principle decorations of this saloon, hung with crimson velvet, embroidered with gold.

☞ A letter from the American Consul at Odessa says the stock of wheat in port is 440,000 bushels, and though there were about 120 sail of vessels in port, of different flags, they had not only all engaged cargoes, but there was a scarcity of north continental shipping, and high rates of freight were paying to England, Holland and Belgium.

Legislative Instructions.

The Pennsylvanian of the 12th inst., in referring to the attempts made at Harrisburgh, in the House of Representatives, to bring forward resolutions on the subject of the Tariff, denounces the offer of any such resolutions by a State Legislature. Such topics belong, as the Pennsylvanian intimates, to Congress, and not to the Legislatures of the States. "Public opinion (the Pennsylvanian continues,) is well known in this State, and Legislative declarations cannot add to its influence on our representatives in Congress a particle."

We think that the effort to exclude or suppress, an expression of the sentiments of the Pennsylvania Legislature on the Tariff, arises more from an unwillingness on the part of the Democrats to utter opinions at variance with those of President Polk, or else adverse to popular feeling in this Commonwealth, than to any belief that such State Legislature resolutions are improper. For the Democrats have set many examples of passing State Resolutions, in our Legislature, instructing the Senators and requesting the members of the House of Representatives in Congress, to adopt certain courses. In many cases, it is true, such proceedings might well be dispensed with, but often times they form as important a part of the duty of the State Legislature, as they have to perform. Each instance, of the kind, must be judged by its own peculiar circumstances; and in this matter of the Tariff, we think the Pennsylvanian is far from right.

Governor Shunk, in his message, expressly notices the subject of the Tariff, and says: "it is not surprising, therefore, that our people feel a deep anxiety in regard to the adoption or the change of any policy, on the part of the Federal Government, which may be supposed to affect such great interests." He then refers to what he considers to be the true policy of the Nation, "which (says the message) would seem to lie between the extremes of those, who claim high duties for the mere purpose of protecting particular interests, and those who would not discriminate at all, in laying revenue duties for the purpose of favoring the productions and industry of our own country." Will any one tell us, what the Governor really means by this sentence? In his Message, intended for the people of a State, known to be favorable to a Tariff for protecting home industry, he gives utterance to these words, which, while they seem to speak something, actually convey no meaning, or are of so loose an application as to be capable of conveying an approbation of free trade or of protection, just as President Polk, and his administration may choose to dictate. Is it not, therefore, incumbent upon the Legislature, to affix a more definite meaning upon an expression on an interest, in regard to which the people of this Commonwealth, confessedly feel this "deep anxiety," especially as this very point is officially brought before their notice by the Chief Magistrate, in pursuance of what he believes to be his executive duty!

And in another point of view, it is proper for the Pennsylvania Legislature to act on this subject. For the nomination of Mr. Polk for the office of President, was sustained by the Democratic party of Pennsylvania, on the supposition, real or pretended, that his election would not impair the protection of American industry,—a supposition very different from that which is created by the terms of his definition of a revenue duty, as contained in his message to Congress. And, therefore, it is right for the State Legislature, to express their sentiments on this matter, in order that the real wishes of Pennsylvania may be freed from any obscurity. Surely it is as much their province and duty so to do, as it was for Governor Shunk to express his own opinion, in the Message. For as the affair now stands, it may be implied that the Governor's phrase, which means anything or nothing—was adopted by the Legislature, from their very silence about it.

We are constrained to believe, that the leading Democrats in Pennsylvania, are endeavoring to manage the expression of popular sentiment in our State, on the Tariff, so as to suit their own party purposes, and without a sufficient regard to the momentous interests which are in jeopardy. By the tenor of the Governor's Message, they may lull public vigilance asleep, within the State limits, under the pretext that the Governor has already spoken on the subject, while at Washington, they may allege that Pennsylvanians are satisfied with the exposition of a reve ue Tariff given by the President. They fear to speak out frankly their thoughts; for either they must give offence at Washington or in Pennsylvania; and this is the reason of their studious silence, and of the opposition to the resolutions at Harrisburgh.

Boston.

The Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr., the newly elected Mayor of the city of Boston, took the oath of office on Monday morning and entered on the discharge of his duties. He delivered an Address on the occasion, as is customary, from which we extract the following passage respecting the benefits which have accrued to Boston from the railroad system:

Five years ago, Boston had comparatively no back country; now, nine hundred miles of New England railroads centre here, and as many more, within New England, are in the process of construction. These render Boston emphatically her capital. And I know of no prouder position for a city than to be the point that concentrates the energy and wealth of such a body of industrious, intelligent and virtuous freemen—of Americans, natives of the soil, who promote her prosperity in peace as readily as their fathers defended her in war.

Considered in this light alone, the position of Boston is one of present power, with a certainty of rapid advancement. But her connections already stretch far beyond New England. She is on the high road between Europe and the West; and that vast country has become tributary to her increase. The car that leaves our city this morning may deposite its merchandize in thirty-six hours on the shores of Lake Erie, five hundred miles from the place of its departure—from thence inland seas, navigable for vessels of the largest class, stretch away for hundreds of miles along shores fertile for agriculture, or rich in minerals. Canals already connect these lakes with the valley of the Mississippi, and with the navigable waters of her and her tributaries, which, extending twenty thousand miles, communicate with forty thousand miles of shores unrivalled in fertility.—But more rapid modes of communication will this year be opened. The Railroad from Cincinnati to Sandusky, built by the aid of the citizens of Boston, will bring the Ohio within a journey of three days. Enabling the traveller to reach Boston from Cincinnati in twelve hours less time than he can Baltimore, although the latter is three hundred miles the nearest.

But these are but a small part of the railways, that are to increase the prosperity of Boston.—There are already in process of construction, roads stretching towards Montreal, Burlington, Ogdensburgh, roads branching from Albany will reach Kingston and extend thence through Canada West; others running from Buffalo to Detroit on both sides of Lake Erie, will ere long reach the upper sources of the Mississippi—and the child is now born, who will see them terminate at the Pacific. The time may come, when the expectation that led Columbus to seek a passage to India from Europe, by proceeding West, will be realized, and the direct communication between those points may pass through the city of Boston.

Such facilities of intercourse joined to the character and wealth of our population, render the progress of the city a matter of certainty—occupying the nearest point to Europe, and connected with the North, the West, and the South, by thousands of miles of internal communication—her increase will surpass the most sanguine anticipations of her friends.

☞ We were shown yesterday, a petition to the Legislature of our State, praying that the Right of Way might be granted to the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road. It was a long one, indeed; but more remarkable for the character and standing of the men whose names were attached to it.

☞ A baby, three months old, was stolen from its mother in Cincinnati a few days since. The child was stolen from the cradle, where its mother had placed it for the purpose of going out to purchase groceries. She was gone but a few minutes and when she returned her child was gone, and all trace of its whereabouts proved fruitless.

The new mode of Warfare.

The Sentinel of Philadelphia has an article upon "the coast defences of England," and in connection with this subject, notices "the great changes necessarily to be introduced into military tactics, and in the plans of fortifications, since the adaptation of steam machinery to vessels of war." In England, they have had these considerations under serious examination, and "they all appear to agree in the opinion that the coast defences of that country, are altogether insufficient to repel an invasion, or even to offer a respectable resistance to the debarkation of any body of troops." For by the war steamers, hostile incursions may be made into an enemy's country not assailable under the old plan. The English Government therefore, is called upon to incur heavy expenditures by the increase of their fortifications, and consequently, in the enlargement of their regular and standing army.

This subject of the change in the mode of war, which must be exhibited in the next hostilities which may occur between nations, should be a warning to the United States. Heretofore our National Government has not thought it proper to expend much money from the Federal treasury, for connecting States and Territories, and opening national routes for the transportation of armaments and provisions, with other necessaries, in the event of foreign hostilities. Such preparations ought to be made in time of peace. Will not our country now see the propriety of attending to measures of this kind? We look upon it as important in the highest degree. It may be thought, indeed, that we have a local interest in the affair; for surely a military connection will be needed through Pittsburgh, not only as offering a convenient and easy communication with the Ohio and the Lakes, as well as the East, but as presenting the advantage of safety from the inroads of the enemy. But whether the general government, should turn their favorable attention to Pittsburgh or not, still we say that such communications or routes for transportation are now absolutely necessary.

The Tariff.

The Hon. C. Hudson has written a letter to this effect:—"Perhaps you as a conductor of the Press, would like to know the opinion which prevails on a subject which deeply interests the people of our State, viz:—the Tariff. I think its fate is sealed. To save it in the House, we may have every Whig vote and about 36 of the Democratic votes and I cannot reckon more than 26. In the Senate, if the two Texan Senators, which will be on before the subject is acted upon, be free trade men as they doubtless will be, there is no hope of arresting it there. I think, therefore, that we have to submit to Democratic free trade."

The Forsaken.

What a volume is contained in the following paragraph, which we find in the Tribune: "But for the providential aid of a physician, the Coroner would have had one of his unpleasant duties to perform on Tuesday upon the body of a young female in Rivington street, who, upon learning that he to whom she deemed herself betrothed had wedded another in a neighboring city, attempted to "shuffle off this mortal coil" by swallowing a dose of laudanum. She retired to her apartment after taking the drug, and concealed the empty phial in a drawer of her dressing-table, which her mother, having occasion to look for something in the drawer soon after discovered, barely in season to counteract her suicidal purpose."

An Outrage.

The Baltimore Sun says that a flagrant outrage "was perpetrated the other day in the house of Delegates of Maryland, in a solemn proposition made by Mr. Reeder, that the legislature pass a law enslaving all the free negroes of the State, and providing for the sale of them, the proceeds to be applied to the liquidation of the State debt. Too monstrous for earnest, yet too solemn for a jest, the house seemed for a moment paralyzed; but promptly expressing a universal abhorrence of the proposition, Mr. Reeder withdrew it!"

☞ A letter from an officer, U. S. A.. at Fort Smith, Ark states "The whole country about us is filled with imigrants—every avenue is choked up with the wagons and stock of this moving world." It further states, that a party of Cherokees have been looking out for a location on the head waters of the Brasos and the Trinity. The first news, says the Civilian, is welcome; not so the other. Texas has already more than enough of Indians.

☞ A correspondent of the Boston Atlas says, that an interesting discovery has been made at Geneva. The manuscript of the last Canto of Don Juan had been found. It is in Lord Byron's own handwriting. It is said to be unusually racy, and will speedily be published in Paris. A new composition, by Weber, has also turned up, by accident, and a magnificent poem, by Ariosto.

POLICE.—On Wednesday morning there were a few cases before his honor.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Long and the Short of it.

One of the most amusing incidents constantly occurring on the floor of the House of Congress is the representation in the area, in front of the clerks desk, of "the long and the short of it" from Illinois, whenever Mr. Wentworth and Mr. Douglass stand up there together and hold a private conversation—as they frequently do. Mr. Wentworth is supposed to be six feet seven, and Mr. Douglass five feet four. With all this difference in height, they are said to be equally clever in their way.

Mock Auction Case.

Yesterday a man by the name of Laird, who hailed from Northampton County, Pa., and who had come to the city with a load of pork, having disposed of his cargo at the Centre Market for about $50, was induced to enter Swift's auction store, No. 5 Chatham street, a few doors from Tammany. The hammer of the auctioneer and his lungs also were going at a prodigious rate, and great bargains were being sold. The property of a poor widow, relic of a late jeweller, or some other individual, was about to be sacrificed to pay the demands of a griping landlord, and keep her dear and interesting family from the horrors of starvation; and surely how could an unsophisticated country philanthropist refuse to bid, especially when the articles were so amazingly cheap! As a consequence, our Pennsylvanian commenced bidding for a lot of glittering gew-gaws, and the Funks in attendance commenced biding; one offering $10 for this article, and a second promising to take another off his hands for $5, until finally the miserable lot was knocked down to him at a sum far beyond his means, the proceeds of his pork speculation thrown into the bargain. Mr. Laird, when called into the captain's office to settle, found that he had got among the Philistines, who shaved him of every cent he had, amounting to some $54, for which he got no equivalent, the trash doled out to him being scarcely worth removal. He applied to the office of the chief of police for redress, but as the Funks refused to make restitution, there is a strong probability that No. 5 will become a banner office ere long. Once for all, we warn countrymen not to go near a red flag in this city. They have no business at such places; and if they neglect this caution, they will most assuredly get bit.—N. Y. Morning News.

Loss of the Ship "Lancaster."

Capt. Howes, of the ship Washington Alston, of Yew Castle Maine, at New Orleans, states that he spoke on the 29th ult., ship Rigar, from Antwerp to Galveston, with emigrants. The Rigar had been boarded three days before, on the Bahama banks by Captain Simmonds, of ship Lancaster, of Boston, who came off a wrecker; and who stated that the Lancaster had gone ashore on Orange Keys, on the 21st December, and was a total wreck. Only a part of the cargo was saved.

☞ The New Orleans Courier says, there has been much exaggeration of the effects of the cold and frost upon the sugar crop. The crop is better than an average one, and if any loss is occasioned by the cold, the whole deficiency will not amount to more than 20.000 hogsheads in the whole State.

☞ "Gentlemen of the jury," said a western lawyer, "would you set a rat trap to catch a bear?—Would you make d—d fools of yourselves by endeavoring to spear a Buffalo with a knitting needle? Or would you attempt to empty out the Mississippi with a gourd? No, gentlemen, I know you would not; then how can you be guilty of the absurdity of finding my client guilty of manslaughter for taking the life of a woman!"

Law Intelligence.

[REPORTED FOR THE COMMERCIAL JOURNAL.]

In the District Court of Allegheny county, before Judge Grier, January 14, 1846.

This was a case of peculiar interest. A man of the name of Samuel Barnum, had lit in Pittsburgh, from some place or other, and having apparently property, or a knack of making persons believe that he had, he got into a large business. Among expedients for raising the wind, he was in the habit of getting false bills of lading, purporting that he had shipped merchandize, when, in reality, he had not done so; and upon these fraudulent vouchers, he obtained advances from merchants in Philadelphia; and among the rest, from McCutcheon & Collins, the plaintiffs in the above case.

Some time in May last, Robert H. King, the defendant, sent 248 barrels of flour to the warehouse of Jacob Mattern & Co., who were transporters on the Canal, at Pittsburgh; and for which the receipts of Mattern & Co., were given to Robert H. King. Afterwards, Samuel Barnum, above named, who was then doing an extensive business in the flour way, called at Mattern & Co's warehouse, through whom he usually shipped his flour, and represented the flour as his, and desired Mattern & Co. to ship the flour to McCutcheon & Collins, (the plaintiffs) in Philadelphia; which Mattern & Co., on the representations of Barnum, and without instructions from King, agreed to do. They marked the flour for Barnum and gave a receipt to him for the flour, to be delivered in Philadelphia to the plaintiffs. This receipt Barnum forwarded to the plaintiffs, to whom he was in debt, in a large amount, with instructions to them to sell the flour for him. Mattern & Co., (the transporters) shipped a part of the flour, on a canal boat, in pursuance of their receipt to Barnum; but before the boat had started from Pittsburgh, Barnum was arrested on a charge of Forgery, and upon a compromise of that charge, he fled the Country. And thereupon the defendant (King) ascertaining how his flour was disposed of, issued a writ of Replevin, and claimed it as his, and it was delivered to him. McCutcheon & Collins of Philadelphia, bring this action of Trover & Conversion against King, and claim the property as theirs, by reason of the transactions with Barnum as above set forth.

Judge Grier charged the Jury that the plaintiff's and defendant had each their equities; for the party against whom the cause should be decided, would be a loser by the swindling and fraudulent transactions of Barnum. The rule of law is, where both parties have their equity, the Court must look to the strict legal rights, and decide the cause without reference to equity. Now, what are the strict legal rights of the plaintiffs? For it rests upon them to make out their cause.

This is an action of trover, and in order to sustain an action of trover, the plaintiffs must prove the possession or the title to the goods to have been in themselves. But have they done so?—Suppose that Barnum had actually had a right to consign these goods to plaintiffs; yet Barnum had not sold, but had only consigned the goods to plaintiffs, with injunctions to sell them for him.—If there had been a delivery to the plaintiffs, they might have retained for their general balance; but there had been no delivery to them. For, suppose the goods had been lost on the passage, by the default of the carriers—in whose name would the action for the loss have been? Surely not in the names of M'Cutcheon & Collins. There had been no sale of the goods to them, nor any delivery to them or to their agents; and, therefore, they cannot sustain this action.

But, in another point of view, they have no right to recover. For Barnum had no authority, whatever, from anything that appears in proof in this case, to exercise a disposal over these goods. The flour belonged to King; and Mattern & Co. acted without a right in turning it over to Barnum, and their wrongful act confers no authority either upon Barnum, or the consignees of Barnum, to dispossess Mr King of his property.

Shaler and M'Candless for plaintiffs; Loomis, Dunlap and Bakewell for defendant. Verdict for defendant.

In this case, Judge Grier paid a handsome compliment to Mr. Bakewell, for the care and legal discrimination with which he had prepared and presented his side of the cause in opening.

Doings in Philadelphia.

From the local column of the United States Gazette, we clip the following:

On Saturday night, officers Kelley, Towell, and Berry, of the Santhwark Police, started in pursuit of a man named William McMullen, against whom five or six different warrants had been issued, for various offences.

The officers separated, and while Kelley was proceeding along Plumb street, near Fourth, he encountered McMullin, and caught hold of him.—McMullin turned upon him, and with a dirk inflicted a slight wound.

A young man named Carson then went to the assistance of the constable, and was also attacked, and with the same dirk, in the hands of McMullin, and had the leaders and veins of one of his wrists severed.

A man who resided in the vicinity, heard the voice of Kelly, and being disposed to defend him, jumped out of bed, and, in the impulse of the moment, leaped out of the second story window into the street, without sustaining any material injury.

In the mean time, the other officers came uy, and took McMullin into custody, and on being brought before Alderman McKinley, he was committed.

About thirty of the prisoner's friends collected, for the purpose of rescuing him. They followed the officers down to the prison, and for fear they would attempt a rescue, an officer held the muzzle of a loaded pistol to the head of McMullin, and threatened to shoot him as soon as such an attempt was made.

Several citizens who had aided the officers succeeded in getting into the prison, except one. This person the mob fell upon and beat in a very serious manner.

The officers came out to protect him, and on retiring up the road the rascals made another attack upon them. The injured man pointed out the principal of the gang, when officer Towell deliberately walked up to him and knocked him down, and took him into custody.

At Alderman McKinley's office he gave his name as Minkin and was committed, as well as a man named Beers, who was also charged with being one of the most conspicious of the party. All of the prisoners were found to be armed with dirks and maces of the most formidable description.

The conduct of the officers throughout is represented as being worthy of the highest praise, as they manifested the highest degree of coolness and courage in the performance of their dangerous duties.

Odd-Fellowship.

The Christian Advocate and Journal, an organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, being called on lately by a correspondent, to define his position in relation to Odd-Fellowship, made the following response: "We confess that we are at a loss what to do, as editors of a religious journal, simply because we do not know enough about Odd Fellowship and Free Masonry, to decide whether such connection be of good or evil tendency. All that we can promise is, that when we see the path of duty, we shall take it, lead where it may."

War and Canada.

The Detroit Advertiser in the course of an article on Oregon and war says: "If war unhappily do come, then we have something to say about its object and end. * * * Canada and the other provinces must be ours, in the event of a war, cost what it may. The whole lake country will insist upon it. We shall go into the war with the distinct understanding that peace is not to be concluded until these objects are secured. And we desire all Southern gentlemen especially to understand this fully in the start. The juggle of the last war is not to be played over again by a Southern Administration. If war is once begun, no peace is to be made under any circumstances without a cession of Canada."

Acknowledgment.

We are indebted to Mr. Darragh, our Representative in Congress, for valuable documents.

We are also indebted to the attention of our Representatives in the State Legislature, Messrs. Hilands and McCurdy, for like favors.

Twenty-ninth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

From the Baltimore Sun.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12, 1845.

Mr. Wescott apprised the Senate that, by an act of the Florida Legislature, the name of Mr. Levy has been changed to David Levy Yulee.

Mr. Fairfield, from the Naval committee, reported a bill appropriating $5,625,000 to provide for the increase of our naval force. It provides for the construction of ten steam vessels of war, viz: three frigates, five sloops, and two smaller vessels.

The President is also authorized by the bill to have put in commission all vessels now on the stocks, whenever he shall deem it proper, and to purchase the proper naval stores. It was laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Levy offered a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the committee on naval affairs to report on the latest improvements in war steamers, and also relative to the condition of the defences on the Gulf of Mexico.

The joint resolutions of Mr. Allen, giving the Oregon notice, was taken up, and, by a vote of 32 to 18, postponed till the 10th of February. The resolutions of Mr. Hannegan were also postponed till that day.

Mr. Benton reported a bill to abolish the duty on salt.

After the disposal of several local matters, the Senate went into an Executive session, and then adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

This being the regular day for petions, Mr. Adams took the floor and unloaded his ammunition drawer. He presented several large bundles of memorials against slavery and Texas,

After presenting an anti-Texas petition from N. Carolina, several members from that State doubted the authenticity of the names, and had them read. To the astonishment of all there was not a single John Smith among the whole lot. This fact appeared to be conclusive evidence of the authenticity of the paper.

Mr. Adams went on to present a great number of petitions, of all sorts and sizes, chiefly from women in various parts of the north and east.—As it was rather adull business, members began to crack jokes and say all manner of witty things.—Some thought Mr. Adams ought to produce the women in the House for the inspection of members. One bachelor member was candid enough to say that he would like to take his choice out of them He intended of course, to go to Oregon.

Mr. Toombs, of New York, having the floor, said he had endeavored to obtain information on this important subject from every practicable source. There were but two questions in the whole controversy—one was "what are our rights," and the other "whether this is the proper time to begin the assertion of our rights!" He went on to say that ten thousand British cannon floating on the seas, ought not in the least to influence American statesmen in the course they ought to pursue. His opinion was, that owing to our blunder in the negotiation, we had, as it were, been brought into a defile. Our only course was then to adopt a course of masterly activity.

Mr. J. R. Ingersoll had laid on the clerk's table, for future consideration, an amendment to the resolution, to the affect, "that the President be authorized at such time as he may deem proper, to open a negotiation with the British Government for the purpose of terminating the joint occupation of Oregon.

Mr. Hamlin said he was not to be diverted from his position by the cry of "war." The object of those who raised the cry was not only to raise a panic here, but a panic in the country, which was to re-act upon Congress. Such a cry as this tended more to produce war than any other cause.—There was no cause of war, and the giving of this notice could not be a war measure. If we were to refrain from the exercise of our clear and unquestionable rights by such a stale cry, how long, he asked, would it be before every nation would be, as it were, invited to insult and oppress us!—It was, in his opinion, one of the highest duties of the American government to afford protection to its citizens wherever they might be found. Was it true that in the 19th century the cry of an American citizen should not receive as much attention as that of a Roman citizen in days of old? But had our government discharged this duty? Not for our citizens in Oregon had been dragged from their firesides, and made amenable to the tribunals of a British province. It was time this should stop. His motto was "notice now at this time, and protection to American citizens wherever they are to be found."

On motion of Mr. Douglas, the bill providing for the organization of the Oregon territory was taken from the committee of the whole, and re-committed to the committee on territories, with a view to some slight amendments.

Mr. Giles presented the petition of Hector Perkins, praying for arrears of pension; referred to the committee on invalid pensions.

An ineffectual motion was made to get in a resolution granting the use of the Hall to the Colonization Society.

The house then adjourned.

The Oregon.

The New York Mirror has started a new rumor in relation to the Oregon. We give the statement for what it is worth, but the question having been in the hands of such searching diplomatists as Messrs. Pakenham and Buchanan, we confess that we have little faith in the story. Still, the subject is one of such importance, that every movement or discovery calculated in the slightest degree to alter the aspect of affairs, is read with great interest:

We have it from a friend who speaks advisedly on the subject, that a distinguished member of the House of Representatives contemplates laying before Congress, very shorsly, an important discovery, which may entirely change the aspect of the Oregon question. It relates to a point in the Nootka Sound Convention, sustained by the contemporaneous history of that treaty, which, strange to say, has escaped the attention of the American Secretary of State, and probably that of the British Minister. No allusion was made to it in the diplomatic correspondence recently published.—Great Britain lays much stress upon the advantages supposed to be given to her claim by the Convention of Nootka Sound.

The vast importance to the United States of the point discovered, consists in the fact, that taking England at her word, proof of the most authentic character can be adduced to sustain our claim fully and undisputedly up to the latitude of 51 deg 50 min. It is not to be presumed that the British Minister would, if aware of the fact, be quite so accommodating as to make it known to the American Government, and thus give us so great an advantage; but in no part of the correspondence has he proved himself equal in sagacity and research to our Secretary of State; and the natural inference is, that what has escaped the scrutiny of Mr Buchanan, has not fallen under the cognizance of Mr. Pakenham. We have seen no allusion to this new feature of the question in the recent Congressional debates, and presume it will not be urged till something is known of the reception of the President's Message in England, or the opening of another negotiation takes place. That England would be rejoiced at the opportunity to retreat honorably from her hitherto obstinate position, and give us a couple of degrees, sooner than resort to war, while at the same time she would not be acting inconsistently with her previous assumptions, but rather upon the assumptions derived from the error hitherto unknown to our Government is not improbable. Should our information prove correct, there will be a commotion at the head quarters, and throughout the country, before long. We sincerely hope it may not turn out to be mere gossip, and that the sagacity of the influential and distinguished gentleman said to have investigated the subject with so much perseverance, may meet with that success which will entitle him to the thanks of the country.

An Explanation.

☞ When we copied the article addressed to us through a Pittsburgh paper, by John B. Miller, we supposed it was from Rev J. B. Miller, of the Allegheny Conference; hence, we headed our article, "what does it mean?" We felt a little afflicted that he should write us such a letter in such a manner. Brother Walker has sent us an explanation. It was another J. B. Miller, a man who was some time since expelled from the Wesleyan church. We are sorry we have paid so much attention to him, and that we supposed such a letter could have been written by a brother in the ministry. We think it unnecessary to publish brother Walker's letter, though he has our hearty thanks for it. This explanation is quite as much as the subject deserves. It is never customary to send such papers for publication. Brother Walker, as Secretary of the Conference, has forwarded the papers to J. B. Miller, who is so anxious for their publication, that he may "Morganize" them to suit himself; though in writing for the papers he did not pay his postage. As good as could be expected from a man who could write such a letter.

To the Rev Luther Lee, Editor of the "True Wesleyan," N. Y.

DEAR SIR—Seeing in your paper of Dec. 6th, 1845, the article given above, "AN EXPLANATION," I feel bound, in justice to myself, to make a few remarks relative thereto. You state, in your pretended explanation of the article in the "True Wesleyan" of November 15th, 1845, with the caption "what does it mean?" that you are sorry for having given so much attention to me; incorrectly supposing that you were addressing the Rev J. B. Miller, of the Allegheny Conference! In your charitable breast then, there existed no sympathy whatever for me, whom you have been pleased to designate as an expelled member. Read from the 10th to the 14th verses inclusive, of the 18th ch. of St. Mathew's Gospel, and learn therefrom a Christian's duty under such circumstances. If the Rev J. W. Walker has forwarded to you any account of my expulsion from the Wesleyan Church, he has furnished you with a palpable falsehood. In the recent trial of the Rev Edward Smith, for an assault and battery committed upon my son John N. Miller, the celebrated Walter Forward and Dr. Wm. Elder, counsel for the defence, took up and tried to maintain the position that I was not a member of the W. C. How then was it possible to expel me? Now sir, I challenge you to publish the Rev J. W. Walker's letter, for which he has publicly received your thanks, and let the community be made acquainted with its contents. You further state in your "explanation" that "Brother Walker has forwarded the papers to J. B. Miller, who is so anxious for their publication that he may "Morganize" them to suit himself, though having written for the papers, he did not pay his postage." Now it so happens, that I have no occasion whatever, for the documents in question, upon the principle contained in the above quotation, having had prudence and foresight enough to keep a correct copy of all the papers forwarded to Conference; and the time may not be very far distant, when they will all see the light.

It will be seen by a perusal of the Rev J. W. Walker's letter, addressed to me on the 28th Nov. 1845, that he holds the opinion, that when papers are sent to a body, they become the property of that body; if so, then I think I am under no obligation to post-pay conference documents, any more than he has a right to pay for my letter, and if he will send me 40 cents, which amount I paid for the papers in question, I will send him his 10 cents with interest! Now sir, I call on this matter (and I think I receive that I have an equitable right to demand it,) is, a fair and impartial exposition of the whole case, from first to last, that both sides of the question may be properly investigated, and that a discerning public may draw their own inferences from tangible data.

You will see from Rev. Walker's letter, which I copy below, that your statement of his having forwarded the letters or papers to J. B. Miller, is altogether untrue.

I remain, &c. JOHN B. MILLER.
Allegheny City, Jan. 13, 1845.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28, 1845.

JOHN B. MILLER—Sir: I received your note, dated November 4th, 1845, this day, and in reply, state that your papers are not in my possession; when papers are sent to a body, they become the property of that body; when said papers are handed to a committee, they are seldom returned unless a request be made to that effect. I have not sent the papers in your case since they were given to the committee. You err in saying that you sent a slight sketch of the report; I sent the report.

You have seen the article in the True Wesleyan, headed "What does it mean?" the purpose. I have sent an answer. Signed, Yours, &c. J. W. WALKER.

P. S. None of your communications to me have been post-paid; I do not feel free to pay the postage of letters on business in which I am in no ways concerned.

OFFICE OF THE GLOBE UNION AGENCY—A public Treasurer Wanted.—A man is wanted to assume the responsibilities and perform the duties of a public Treasurer. He will have to take charge of the revenues of the Agency in particular, and of all moneys that may be deposited by the public in general. The Treasury will be opened in the city of Louisville, and will necessarily have at least three branches in each State, and will sustain a direct relationship with public Treasuries in various other nations. The Board of Directors that will be provided for the purpose, will be found fully competent to direct the operation of the Treasury in a manner that cannot fail to inspire public confidency.

Applications for this highly important and profitable situation will be received from all parts of the remote States. Th man who furnishes the largest amount of personal security will be appointed, with the salary that a majority of the Directors may agree upon.

Applications (post paid) addressed to the Directors of the Globe Union Agency, will be received until the 1st day of March, and will then be decided upon by an impartial committee, appointed for the purpose. WM. COWDEN, jan14-dawdw Agent General for the Directors.

The Original, only true, and genuine Pill.

PINDLAY TOWNSHIP, Allegheny Co, July 2d, 1838.

Messrs. Shinn & Sellers—I feel it a duty I owe to the public and the sending of your celebrated Pills, to testify to the good effects produced by them in my own case. In the fall of 1837, I was attacked severely with the Chronic Liver Complaint, which prostrated all my physical power. I applied to Dr. ——, of Clinton, for medical advice, although enough in his power to mitigate my disease, yet I must honestly say, that I received no permanent relief under his treatment. At this time I considered my case hopeless, when seeing your Liver Pills advertised, I, after a good deal of hesitation, (being urged to try them by my neighbors,) purchased two boxes, and before I had used one whole box, the pain in my side and shoulders, produced by a diseased Liver, was speedily removed. I continued using the Pills at intervals, upon every return of my symptoms, with invariable success. It is my opinion that the Liver Pills will not fail to cure, when the directions are strictly followed. You are at liberty to make any use of the above that you may think proper. I remain your grateful friend,
SAMUEL P. MORRISON.

Those marked thus (•) are provided with Evans' Safety Guard for the prevention of explosion of boilers.

☞ Last evening at dark, there were 5 feet 6 inches water in the channel, and falling slowly. The steamer Cicassian arrived from Cincinnati yesterday She brought some sugar and molasses to this market. The Defiance is hourly expected.

☞ The Allegheny river is still running full of floating ice. The Monongahela had not broke up last evening.

☞ We received a letter from an officer on board the steamboat Herald last evening, dated Cape Giradeau. We will publish it to-morrow.

☞ The steamer National, Capt. Dales, was advertised to leave Cincinnati for New Orleans on the 10th.

☞ The Louisville Courier says: The steamer Cutter broke her shaft and cylinder head at the head of 12 mile island, and was towed down by the Pike No. 7.

THE RIVER—The St. Louis Republican of the 7th says:—The ice above had not given way last evening, but the river rose some three or four inches yesterday, and we look for it to break up to-day.

A gentleman who left for Saverton on Sunday, informs us that the Missisippi had risen 3 feet at that place, and at Louisiana the ice had broken up. The gorge of ice below this city had not given way last evening.

Steamboat Explosion and Loss of Life.

The shark, Captain Whon, in the act of taking a ship in tow off the Balize at New Orleans on the 3d inst., burst her boilers, killing John Whon, brother of the Captain, and scalding the first engineer, James M'Keu, so severely, that little or no hope was entertained of his recovery.—The pilot, Shall, and several of the firemen were badly scalded.

Since writing the above, says the Jeffersonian, we learned that one of the firemen died off the Balize,, and that the 1st engineer, M'Ked cannot possibly survive.

Imports by the River.

CINCINNATI—Per Circassian—12 pkgs mdze, 58 bbls molasses, 2 hhds sugar, 27 sacks corn meal, 2 bales mdze, 15 pkgs mdze.

Correspondence of the Baltimore American.
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12, 1846.

The flour market continues very quiet and holders are asking $5,31¼@5,37½ for standard brands; buyers offer best at $5,25, sales very limited at the first named prices; new Southern Corn is dull at about 63 cents Oats at 39@40; some sales of New Orleans Molasses at 26@26½ cents; small sales of ordinary to prime New Orleans Sugar at 5¾@6 cents; prime Cloverseed is scarce and held at $6.

Stocks fell off decidedly, and with but moderate sales. Penn. 5's closed at 66¾@66¾; Wilmington Road 27¾@28¼; Reading Road 26¼@27; Texas Notes held at 23.

Correspondence of the Baltimore American.
NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5th, 1846.

We had a quiet Cotton market on Saturday, the business of the day only reaching 2200 bales at prices ⅛c lower than those current previous to receipt of the Acadia's advices. This morning the market is in a most unsatisfactory state. Foreign buyers have withdrawn, contending for a much greater reduction than that above stated, while holders, on the contrary, appear indifferent whether they sell or not even at the ⅛c decline.

They are greatly strengthened in this position by the continuance of receipts unusually light for the season. The only transactions taking place are when lots can be purchased on good terms for the Eastern factories. Fine cottons are scarce, and holders will submit to no decline in prices for these grades, say all above middling fair.

The Sugar market was active on Saturday, and 340 hhds. changed hands at full prices—this morning it rains, and all business in both Sugar and Molasses suspended.

Since the sale reported in my last, nothing has been done in the Flour market.

Important from Mexico.

The Pensacola Democrat of the 3d inst. says:

The U. S. ship St. Mary's, Commander Saunders, arrived at this place on Thursday evening, direct from Vera Cruz, in a passage of ten days.

We cannot give authentic intelligence as to our relations with Mexico, but have heard incidentally that our special Minister, Mr. Slidell, was not well received by the Mexican Government.

The St. Mary's brought a large volume of despatches for our Government, which have been forwarded to Washington.

Up to this time no one from shore had boarded her, but several had come ashore from her. Those who came from her report that our Minister was badly received by the Mexican Government, and was in fact insulted. Another story is that he was not received and recognized as such at all.

This statement has created no little excitement here, and if true, it is presumed that the entire Gulf Squadron will shortly appear before Vera Cruz.

The Pensacola Gazette of the 3d inst, also mentions this report, and remarks—

Mr. Slidell has not returned, nor do we undertake to vouch for the correctness of the news; but we are disposed to credit it on account of our critical relations with Great Brttain, a circumstance of which Mexico would not hesitate to take advantage.

BLACK SEA WHEAT.—A letter from the American Consul at Odessa, says the stock of wheat in port is 440,000; there were about 120 sail of vessels in port, of different flags; they had not only nearly all engaged cargoes, but there was a scarcity of north continental shipping, and his rates of freight were paying to England, Holland and Belgium,

BLIGHTED LOVE.—Few dreams outlive so much of the world's strife, and shine so clearly to the last as the sad hallowed remembrance of blighted love. It brightens with the changes of time—it is the fairest vision of life—a gleam from the spirit world of old times—a spell re-calling and concentrating all the memories that shine like gems in the dark, shadowy coronet worn by the past.

☞ The New York Herald says that Fanny Ellsler lost by roguery at the least one half of the money she had made during the two years she had performed in America. This was asserted by Fanny Ellsler in the presence of two other persons, and there can be but little doubt but she told the truth.

Kentucky.

We learn from the Message of Governor Owsley that the affairs of the State are in good condition. The amount of the State debt, instead of being increased, is reduced by the fiscal operations of last year; the resources of the sinking fund have been ample to pay promptly and punctually the interest on the debt without anticipating means; the avails of the Treasury have been abundant to meet the ordinary expenses of the Government, and leave an expected surplus on hand at the end of the next fiscal year; the receipts from taxes, from turnpike roads, from bank dividends, and from the rivers, have all been greater this year than heretofore; all going to show the solid prosperity and the felicitious condition of the Commonwealth, and reflecting the highest praise upon the able and faithful agents to whom the administration of public affairs has been so wisely and happily committed.

Thorn's Yeast Powders.

FOR arising buckwheat, flannel and other cakes.—These Powders are an admirable substitute for yeast, in making all kinds of batter cakes and bread, that do not require much kneading, and have the advantage over that article in making the latter perfectly light and ready for baking the instant they are mixed. Buckwheat and other cakes, when made with these powders, are less likely to disagree with the stomach than those made with yeast; are entirely free from any bitter or unpleasant taste; and as it requires but a few minutes to prepare for baking, the possibility of ever having them sour is avoided. They are used by many respectable families and physicians in the city, and highly approved of. I therefore confidently recommend them to the general use of families and hotel keepers, as being greatly superior to yeast, beside economizing of time and trouble. Prepared and sold by Valuable Real Estate for Sale.

THIRTY ACRES OF GROUND, having an extensive front on the South bank of the Monongahela, (our principal business river where all the steamers lie, and where the heavy business of the City is done,) being the West end of the Borough of Birmingham, laid out into 230 lots of 24 by 100 feet, for Residences, and 96 by 300 feet for Manufactories, fronting on 50 feet streets, and extending back to 20 feet alleys.

TEN ACRES similarly situated and laid out, adjoining the East end of Birmingham.

THIRTY ACRES OF COAL HILL LOTS, running from near the Bridge toward Birmingham, fronting on the two Turnpikes.

These are well known as the most advantageous locations about Pittsburgh, or in the world, for Manufacturing, inexhaustible mines of Coal of the richest and best quality, on the land, and furnished much cheaper than any other place about the City, and being nearly opposite the City Steamboat landing.

For Residences, also, there are no more beautiful, healthy, and convenient locations for those engaged in business in the City; but a few minutes ride or walk from the beautiful new Wire Suspension Bridge; some of the sites commanding fine views of the two Cities, three rivers and surrounding country.

We would prefer to selling, that Capitalists would join us in the erection of manufactories and other improvements. There is a stratum of Coal beneath the surface of 12 to 15 feet in thickness. A large body of the ground also is above the common level, and valuable for making Brick. Being a portion of an undivided estate for the past forty years, has thus been kept out of the market. Could the yearly applications to purchase have been accepted, it would long since have all been sold and compactly built up. It will be sold at less than other property as near the City in other directions, and we particularly invite those interested to compare the prices,) notwithstanding its superior advantages, and must rapidly increase in value beyond other property, as every one can see from its great resources and advantageous location, presenting an object of the most certain and lucrative investment for manufacturing the most advantageous, and for residences the most desirable, all of which is more fully set forth and confirmed, as well as other general information in regard to it and our city, in a pamphlet issued by us, and to be had of Booksellers in this and Eastern cities. If not disposed of previously, it will be sold either in whole or in part of either one of the plots, on Monday, the 25th day of May next, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Terms moderate. O. ORMSBY GREGG,
ISAAC GREGG.

FROM FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED LOTS IN ALLEGHENY CITY, FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers for sale, on accomoeating terms, from fifty to one hundred lots in Allegheny city, the titles to which are indisputable. These lots are twenty four feet in front, running back from eighty to one hundred and forty feet, except the corner lots, which vary from one hundred to upwards of two hundred feet front. They are pleasantly situated in the First Ward, on the bank of the Ohio river, comprising the only portion of Allegheny City suitable for a good Steamboat, or Ferry landing, and are well calculated for residences, extensive Manufacturing establishments, or other purposes. The Omnibus from the bridge and the Stage for Beaver pass the property, daily, the former at short intervals, and Coal can be procured from which borders on the side of the Ohio, at any season of the year. Manufacturers can obtain the quantity of ground necessary, upon very reasonable terms, and will find it to possess peculiar advantages for such purposes. Mechanics, river men and others will find it an excellent location for the erection of dwellings. A plot of ground can be seen and further information obtained by calling upon the subscribers, on the premises.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.—The undersigned finding it necessary to remove his family to the city, offers for sale on the most accommodating terms, the house and grounds now occupied by him on the Beaver road, Allegheny city, adjacent to the property of Charles Brewer, Esq. Possession being able to give possession, can soon sink into disuse. This, however, seems to be most highly valued by those who have tested its virtues, and experienced its healing efficacy in their own cases. Yours, very respectfully, JAMES RITCHEY.

☞ THOSE WHO COUNTERFEIT a good medicine for the purpose of adding a few dollars to their pockets, are far worse than the manufacturers of spurious coin. For while the latter only robs us of our property, the former take property and health and life away. Dr. Wistar's BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is admitted by thousands, of disinterested witnesses, to have effected the most extraordinary cures in cases of an asthmatic character ever before recorded in the history of medicine.

The young, and beautiful, the good, all speak forth its praise. It is now the favorite medicine in the most intelligent families of our country.

Such a high stand in public estimation has been achieved by its own merits alone. And so long as a discerning public are careful to get Wistar's BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, and refuse with scorn every counterfeit and every other article proffered to them as a substitute, so long will cures—POSITIVE CURES—cheer the fireside of many a despairing family.

☞ The true and genuine "Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry," is sold at established agencies in all parts of the United States.

Sold in Cincinnati, on the corner of Fourth and Walnut streets, by SANDFORD & PARK.

Gen'l Agents for the Western States.

Also, sold wholesale and retail by L. Wilcox, and R. A. Fahnestock, Pittsburgh, Pa., and by appointed agents in every important Borough in Western Pennsylvania. oct. 10-1y.

PURE FLUID MAGNESIA.—The subscriber personally superintending the preparation of Pure Fluid Magnesia, which he warrants equal in strength and purity to that of any other preparation. A table spoonful of Fluid Magnesia is equal in strength to half a tea spoonful of common Magnesia, and it is not liable to injure the coats of the stomach, as the latter sometimes does, from its hard, gritty form. Persons requiring an aperient and anti-acid will at once appreciate the advantages of this preparation. An ounce or two of the solution speedily removes Heartburn, Acid eructations, Sourness, or irregular digestion of females and children. Cold and Indigestion attended by general debility, Headache, Acidities &c., Gravel and Gouty complaints, Cutaneous diseases and dyspepsia, depending on the presence of acid matters in the Stomach, are speedily removed by the use of the solution. Infants at the breast are subject to acidification of which the Solution is the best and remedy. See large bills for further particulars.

This article is prepared with great care at the drug store of H. SMYSER, and for sale wholesale and retail on the most accommodating terms. dec 8-1y

Sellers' Imperial Cough Syrup.

FOR the cure of coughs, colds, hoarseness, influenza, tickling sensation of the throat, whooping cough, &c., pronounced to be the pleasantest and most efficacious remedy now in use. Sellers' Imperial Cough Syrup has given relief to hundreds who have used it, and the proprietor is persuaded that it has the power to impart benefit that cannot be had from any cough mixture in general use. Most of the mixtures sold are composed of spiritous and inflammatory articles, which, while they give a little relief, really do harm. The Imperial Cough Syrup contains no spirituous ingredient whatever, and may be used in all cases not requiring active medicinal treatment. The imperial Cough Syrup has been used for the last six years by the most respectable inhabitants of Pittsburgh and vicinity. Give it one trial.

Prepared and sold wholesale and retail by R. E. SELLER'S, No. 125 Smithfield street, and also by Kerr & Mohrhead, 145 Wood st., Wilson & Wood, 3d and Wood market street, Fess & Cassel, 5th Ward, H. P. Schwartz and Jno. Mitchel Allegheny City. dec 17-1w

ORNAMENTAL HAIR WORK.—JOHN FECK, Wig maker, in the old stand, No. 49, Fourth street, between Wood and Market streets, wishes to inform the public that, having just returned from the cities of Philadelphia and New York, with a new supply of stock, he is now prepared to fill all orders in his line, and that he still intends keeping a large assortment of Ornamental Hair Work, viz: Ladies' Wigs, Bands, Braids, Curls' Necklaces, Guard Chains, Bracelets, &c.; Gentlemens' Wigs, Toupees, Scratches, &c., all of which he will sold low for cash. 1924

FIRE PROOF ROOFING.—The subscriber is now prepared to execute orders for Beacon's Patent Composition Fire Proof Roofing, at a cost considerably less than the ordinary Shingle Roofing, and warrant it for five years, a specimen of which can be seen at the corner of Front, at Mr. Varner's Hotel. This composition is far preferable to metalic roofing, as it is a non-conductor of heat—nothing in its composition to rust, and for durability—durability—it will last as long as the walls of the building—and can be afforded for one half of the cost for any metalic used for the above purpose.

The article is supercoeling almost entirely every other method of roofing in some of the Eastern cities, and only wants to be known for its general adoption.

A few testimonials of its merits are subjoined:—

NEWARK, N. J., May 16, 1845.

Some three or four years since we had the Zinc roofing taken off our building, and Mr. Bacon covered them with his Composition Roofing, which answered an excellent purpose for over two years, and until the buildings were destroyed by fire, at which time it was observed that they stood the fire extremely well, and did not conduct it, and in fact it did not consume as fast as the boards or planks upon which the Composition was laid.

Our buildings have been rebuilt within the last year, and they are entirely covered with the said Composition, although of great width and length, and forming together an area of from 12,000 to 15,000 square feet, showing sufficiently, we think, the estimation we have of such roofing and our confidence therein. NEWARK, N. J., May 17, 1845. }

Since the fire in the Messrs. Hedenburg & Son's buildings, an alarming fire broke out of a large building adjacent to Mr. J. M. Quinby's factory buildings, under insurance by this Company, which were much exposed; one of them with the composition Roof, was in danger of being consumed in a few minutes, and the roof escaped injury, while many of its windows and some of its doors were destroyed.

From my observation and the opinion expressed either by persons who have taken pains to inform themselves with respect to Mr. Simeon Bacon Jr.'s composition, I am convinced that it is equal, if not superior to zinc for roofing.

W. A. MYER, President.

To all whom it may concern, this is so certify that I have had one of Mr. Bacon's composition Roofs in use for two or three years past, and am well pleased with it. I fitted it in the first place on one of my workshops, and after giving it a fair trial, I had the zinc roofs taken off of the rest of my factory, and this composition put on, and find it to answer much better, and I cordially recommend it to public favor. J. M. QUINBY.

NEWARK, May 12, 1845.

This is to certify that I have had one of Mr. Bacon's Composition Roofs on my shop for the last year, and, as far as my experience goes, would recommend it to general use. M. GOULD.

NEWARK, May 16, 1845.

Being well assured, upon particular enquiry, that Bacon's Composition Roofing is in all respects preferable to tin, we have adopted this method of covering our manufactories, Hope Buildings, No. 2, which are 125 by 30 feet.

We, Master Builders of Newark, N. J., having seen for the last two or three years, Bacon's Patent Composition Roofing, both on account of its protection in case of fire, and its entire protection from water.
